

You Don't Have Enough Time?! Pretty soon there won't be time—at all...

It doesn't take a genius to figure out that life on earth is not an easy ride. Even those who live on Easy Street are not immune to the trouble that attempts, tirelessly, to climb out of the gutters running by their homes. Darkness is no respecter of persons, and awaits only the absence of light before it rears its ugly head and quickly wraps its tail around whoever is close at hand—whoever!

A glance at the TV during NEWS time is revealing. In a half hour cameras and reporters positioned around the world attempt to show us how hungry people are; how tired the world is; how fearful we are for the killer on the loose; how fed up we are with politicians and money-managers, and how many soldiers we lost today in some remote corner of the planet. While we catch our breath during the breaks, we are told how to shop, how to invest, what to watch, who to vote for; we are reminded of some wonder drug that's going to cure "This" or relieve "That"—better than the other brand.

In the "Developed" world, the pace of life is so distracting for most of us that we could almost be forgiven for buying in to the banter that streams constantly into our ears and eyes—"Gotta get ahead;" "Gotta be first;" "Better have one more degree than the next applicant;" "Eat this, drink that." If a person has time for organized religion in their life, it's for no more than one day in a week. Those of us without children or aging parents might feel we can afford a little more time, but it's not a guarantee. After all, there's food to put on the table, and "We have to work, you know."

One can almost sense the intelligence behind this constant round of activity; an invisible, faceless force like that of gravity, always pulling us on and on and on as we accelerate toward a sudden crash. Our world is presently so connected that there is no opportunity to say, "Nothing is going on." While one half of the world is enjoying a night's sleep, at the same time the other half is wrestling to stay awake during their afternoon lull. While one section of the world is enjoying Sabbath, just a few miles over the horizon an upright businessman is rushing to get things in order before his sun goes down for the day.

Most of the world, including much of the Christian clan, have no idea that we are on a rendezvous with an appointment that none of us shall be too busy to miss—the Second Coming of Christ. A popular hymn in some corners of the globe begins thus: "The day is fast approaching when the Savior shall appear; and every eye His glory shall behold..." and finishes: "With holy zeal and patient faith let every soul prepare to join the Advent chorus in the sky." The last ride off the planet is undoubtedly an event that someone has to plan for—ahead of time. It's like waiting for a taxi to pick you up; you pack before it arrives.

Now is the time you can spread the word that the last ride out is on the way. We don't know exactly when it will arrive, but we do know the visit will be brief, and once begun, will offer no further time for preparation. The mess our world is in is very real; go spread some light so that the sufferers shall be able to see the bigger realities. There are many free resources on our website; check it out.
