

Brick by Brick Headed toward a much grander design ...

IF YOU'VE EVER TAKEN THE TIME TO WATCH A master brickmason at work, you'll appreciate the patience needed to make masonry look right. First the mason has to have a plan, a goal, a pattern of how the finished product should look. All the bricks have to be the right shape. All the tools have to be close at hand. A supply of good cement and sand has to be found. Fresh water is needed, both for the mortar and for cleaning. All this has to be available before the first brick is laid. And before the first brick can be laid, there has to be a foundation sufficient for the entire structure—no matter the size of the structure.

As pretty as the finished work might turn out, it can be argued that the most important part of the job is getting the foundation right—square, level and actually in the correct place. Just here you might call to mind an image of the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Since the earth is a sphere float-ing through space we don't think of it as having a foundation, but that's actually how the Book of Job pictures the creation of our little world (Job 38:6).

Since God laid a foundation, we can deduce that He had a plan, something that He wanted to put on that Foundation. In a very earthly sense, all of life owes its existence to the crafting of that first earthly foundation; and in a very spiritual sense, all of life owes its next thought to the Cornerstone upon which everything else is laid. Jesus Christ is that Cornerstone, providing a level and a square from which everything else may be measured and drawn—from the very small to the very large.

Though the world was finished at the Creation, we can be assured that God has continued His work of crafting, molding and assembling the hearts and minds of men and women. Unlike the mason, God works with a mortar that has not yet set up completely. And the mason has not the luxury of cooperation from the bricks.

In fashioning this world God used tools for which we have no equal, neither very large nor very small. To accomplish that which a trowel or a hammer cannot supply He uses His Word. Ideas planted in the human heart cause the structure to be raised according to His design, and once finished, will stand the test of time for which we have no clock.

Right now there is time for God to tap and nudge the building blocks of men, women and children into the pattern He dreamed for them long, long ago. Our job is to provide the ideas, ideas contained in the books we offer, ideas which cause the soul, through the eye of faith, to catch sight of the Master Mason.
