

What In the World Are We Going to Do Now? With so much light available, what's so special about ours?

MORE THAN HALFWAY THROUGH THE YEAR AND the world remains steadfastly on course for an unprecedented event: the appearance of its Creator. Yet when you look around, you realize that most of the people living on the planet are either indifferent or oblivious to this point-of-no-return to be ushered in by the return of Christ our Lord.

It's hard to blame people for their ignorance of the bigger reality; the world, to the eye of appearance, continues much the same as it did yesterday, and the day before, and as it did last year. In fact, people say, the only real changes to our world have happened in society — people wear different clothes than their parents, drive different cars, pay more for gasoline and cable TV. We have access to wonderful technology designed to make our lives easier and better. Yes, society has changed — but are things really easier? Or better?

There are cars that park themselves, phones that manage every little detail of our lives (if we let them), computers are incorporated into just about everything from the watch to the coffee-maker to the International Space Station. Man is inventing machines to lighten the load, while the machine is making the man unnecessary. A report surfaced a few days ago revealing that two Facebook Artificial Intelligence programs developed their own language to communicate with each other which only they understood. What appeared at first to be close to gibberish was later seen to have very clear patterns. The programs were quickly abandoned for the reason that they needed to be able to communicate with people, not other machines. Interesting though, isn't it? Our own creations cutting out the middle man—us. Dots and dashes reinventing the spoken word.

So where do you and I fit in to this picture of the end of all things? Are we to scream at the top of our lungs on street corners that “the end of the world is nigh”? Shall we pitch a tent outside of Vatican City or the White House, day by day proclaiming the errors of the Beast and its Image? We could, and we wouldn't be in error. But how about the timing? If you think about it for a moment you realize that whenever you've passed people on the streets behaving in that fashion, you've actually been somewhat fearful of them, because you can't hear what they're saying above the language of their behavior.

Those of you who have been acquainted with our ministry and have worked with and supported us over the years will have recognized by now that we have somewhat of a hushed course of action when we go about the business of spreading our truth-filled books. We'd love to tell you stories of victories in lands living under the rule of a dictator. But we can't. We can't because that work is still being conducted, not only by us, but by many others like us. Those of you who have followed our reports over the years will be aware of our efforts which have been clearly written for all to see. But God has sheep also in other pastures, pastures a little more rocky than those in the “free world” (whatever that means anymore). Some stories we won't be able to tell until we reach the safety of the other side.

Freedom is not necessarily liberating to all who are offered it. Not everybody wants to think for his or herself or weigh the many sides of an argument. It's a strange notion, but freedom to make our own decisions is too heavy a burden for some people to carry. But some do want to exercise the right to think, and for those still living in darkness we have light to offer — light that matters. Share our books from the Father of Lights; be strong and of a good courage. Our God is good and will stay with us till the end. Your Mission World Family
