

An Ounce of Humility Is Worth Tons! Don't worry about the glory, just get the job done ...

SEEMS LIKE IT'S A RARE PERSON WHO CAN ENJOY A mixture of being smart and having extensive knowledge without being either a bore, or a real pain in the neck. One of the biggest hindrances to the Christian witness is that of, not "Holier than thou," but "More knowledgeable than thou." You've met them; no matter how much you know about the subject, they know about it better than thou dost. Whether they're sitting next to you in the pew, or knocking on your door from the church down the street, they have something to share with you that you know nothing about, relatively speaking.

Being human is a real tricky act to perform carefully. Because, as Christians, we have a sincere desire to share our knowledge and witness with those we feel are missing out on the joy of a life walking with God. We see the worldling as a person in the clutches and teeth of the Devil; some people look around the sanctuary and have a similar opinion about their churchmates. Perhaps what we all need is a change of perspective. Instead of seeing just a soul to save on the tracks of life with the speeding train bearing down on them, maybe we should look around a little more carefully and realize, that not only are they fallen on the tracks, but there's a chain wrapped around their ankle, and the other end of the chain is attached to ... me!

To be nonchalant about the souls of others would seem to display a nonchalance about our own souls. How can a person say "I love God," and display indifference toward a brother or sister? God is not unmindful regarding the value and salvation of a soul, and He doesn't give others an attitude of apathy, either. Far from it; we're talking about a God who would give His own Son for our redemption.

Perhaps there is no occupation of more value than that of seeking lost souls. There are many fine jobs in which a person may engage, all of them useful and worthwhile. But can there be an activity that will cause you more joy than seeking souls with whom you may spend — not just an earthly lifetime — but also an eternity? If you have a job that brings you a very generous income, consider that still your second job; because your first job will bring a far greater reward, and the workmates are out of this world.
