

"What Is 'Truth'?"

Adapted from TonyHarrimanBlogspot.com: "What's It All About?"

God appears to have this wonderful system in place where truth is continually unfolding to human senses. It's a curious notion, one that is only realized when scientists make some brilliant discovery under the microscope or through the telescope. Of course, scientists rarely praise God for the wonders of His vast creation, but I doubt that God is too terribly troubled by that ignorance. But think about how truth has unfolded before our eyes—in just a couple of lifetimes. We've learned that we are no longer at the center of the universe living on a flat earth; the moon is not made of green cheese, and there are organisms living at a microscopic level which can either help or harm the human system. The list of discoveries, dare I say, is bottomless, and hanging out there for the curious. And no one of us can even dream about what we might discover in the next decade. Perhaps our galaxy will grow from housing an estimated 400 billion stars to being the home of 800 billion—who knows? And after that—what next?

Speaking of truth, here's a thought: The scientific community has agreed upon the notion that nothing, in its present state, may travel at or beyond the speed of light without having been converted to pure energy. Be that as it may, let's say that one day someone develops a craft and fuel that will allow a person to travel much faster than light, and that person jumps in the craft and heads off into the bright blue yonder. It would be possible for that person to overtake the light traveling from our planet which is carrying a record of the events that have taken place throughout our history. Now we're assuming that they have the ability to look back and view these events, and as they do so they will recognize that they are watching things from the past. Once they fine-tune the speed at which the craft is traveling and adjust whatever lens they're looking through, they will find that they may rewind and fast forward as if watching a silent video recording. At that time, any doubt about the truth of historic events will be safely laid to rest. No time for brainstorming here ... maybe another time.

There is a monumental truth that has not yet been realized ... to us. We know about the event, but it hasn't been, shall I say, made beautiful—yet. The event I'm referring to is the Second-coming of Christ. Is it true? No—not yet. Will it be true? Yes—in His time. God doesn't wait for anything; it is we who wait. To God, the truth of the reality is ever-present with Him.

To humans, truth is an elusive commodity, and one that we really don't have full access to—yet. Perhaps for now, truth—real truth—is too pure for us to have echoing between our sorry ears. And though truth, in essence, may not change, it definitely appears to grow—at least in our understanding.

As Christians, we have much to say about the beauties of God and the world He has created. But our greatest and more important task is to lead people to "Come and see!" Allow people the privilege of learning the words of Jesus, that they may continue, and follow. His words contain truth—the only truth that matters, without which none of us can ever expect to be made free.

The fact that everything is not yet beautiful does not make the statement untrue. In God's time—whatever that is—the statement and the fact are absolutely true; because you and I are temporal, living moment by moment, we have to wait for it to be seen.

Take time: go to our website: ThePerfectStormIsComing.org; there is much good food to share. For sure the world is starving, not for bread, but for the Light of the Word of God. If you'll allow Him to, God will shine out of you in ways perhaps you didn't expect.
